Background

The Netherlands Helsinki Committee (NHC), together with Promo-LEX, ARTICLE 19 and the Independent Journalism Center, is implementing the project SCOPE: Strengthening civic organisations for participation and engagement – Expanding civil society's role in Moldova's EU accession.

The project aims to reinforce democratic participation in Moldova and strengthen alignment with EU values by empowering civil society to monitor and engage in the EU accession process. It responds to the need to strengthen the capacity and resilience of civil society organisations, improve cooperation and coordination among civic actors, and support structured dialogue with public authorities on reforms related to rule of law, human rights, democratic governance, media freedom, freedom of expression and civic space. The SCOPE application specifically foresees a long-term training and leadership programme for national-level CSOs and links this programme to a later restricted FSTP scheme for strategic grants.

Funded by the European Union

Within this framework, NHC is launching this call to select participating organisations for the SCOPE Leadership and Training Programme. The programme combines leadership development, thematic expertise, peer learning and coalition-building. It also has a direct link to the project's later restricted grants scheme, ensuring that knowledge and strategies developed during the programme can translate into practical coalition-based advocacy and monitoring projects.

Objective of the Call

This call is open to organisations applying to join the SCOPE Leadership and Training Programme. The programme will equip selected participants with the skills, knowledge and partnerships needed to later access a restricted strategic grants scheme for monitoring and advocacy linked to Moldova's EU accession process.

The programme is intended to:

- strengthen leadership, strategic communications and thematic expertise of participating CSOs;
- deepen participants' knowledge of EU accession-related reforms, in particular in relation to rule of law, human rights, freedom of expression, media freedom, democratic participation and digital rights;
- support peer learning, cooperation and alliance-building among participating organisations;
- enable selected organisations to develop joint strategies and project ideas during the programme; and
- prepare participating organisations to apply, in coalition format, to the later restricted strategic grants scheme for monitoring and advocacy linked to Moldova's EU accession process.

Who should apply

This call is addressed to eligible NGOs / civil society organisations / think tanks applying as organisations, not to individual persons.

Each applicant organisation may nominate up to three staff members to participate in the programme. The nominated participants should collectively represent the organisation's expertise, priorities and potential contribution to the programme. The organisation should nominate staff in a way that supports continuity, internal knowledge-sharing and institutional anchoring of the learning gained through the programme.

Depending on their role, expertise and organisational needs, different nominated staff members may attend the camps that are most relevant to them. At the same time, the organisation remains responsible for ensuring consistent participation in at least four core camps, notably Camps 1, 3 and 4. This model is meant to reduce the risk of staff turnover and ensure that knowledge is retained within the organisation rather than concentrated in one person only.

The working language of the training programme is English, but interpretation to Romanian will be available during the camps.

What selected organisations will receive

Selected organisations will join a 2.5-year leadership and training programme delivered through seven intensive camps, each lasting approximately 2.5 days and hosted in different regions of Moldova. The curriculum combines leadership and coalition-building skills, thematic expertise and EU-level peer learning. All costs related to this leadership and training programme, including transportation, accommodation, meals and training materials, will be covered by the programme.

The camps will cover, among other topics:

- the EU integration process and the role of civil society;
- change management and leadership;
- media freedom, freedom of expression and access to information;
- rule of law, civic monitoring and policy writing;
- networking and exchange with European peers;
- digital rights in the context of EU accession;
- electoral rights and standards; and
- freedom of assembly and association and policy drafting.

Selected organisations will also benefit from:

- peer learning and exchange with other participating organisations;
- support in coalition-building and joint strategy development;
- opportunities to contribute to wider policy dialogue and networking activities under the project; and
- preparation for later participation in the restricted strategic grants scheme.

Link to the later restricted strategic grants scheme

The leadership and training programme has a direct link to the project's restricted FSTP scheme for strategic grants for monitoring and advocacy linked to Moldova's EU accession process. CSOs selected for the training programme will later have the opportunity to develop projects in cooperation with other programme participants and submit proposals under a restricted call. These proposals are expected to be coalition-based and to support monitoring, advocacy, policy engagement, public information and coordination related to accession-linked reforms.

Indicatively, up to 10–12 projects may be selected under that later restricted scheme, with grant amounts of EUR 25,000–30,000 and an implementation period of up to 12 months. The grants are intended to strengthen the role of established national CSOs in monitoring reforms linked to Moldova's EU accession process and in carrying out coalition-based advocacy and evidence-based policy engagement on rule of law, media freedom, human rights and democratic governance.

Participation in the present call does not automatically result in grant funding. It results in selection into the programme and eligibility to access the later restricted grant pathway under the conditions of that subsequent call.
