The programme in short

The Matra Rule of Law Training Programme is designed to strengthen institutional capacity in the field of rule of law within government organisations in Albania, Armenia, Bosnia and Herzegovina, Kosovo, Moldova, Montenegro, North Macedonia, Serbia, Türkiye, and Ukraine. We offer seven training programs each year, providing participants with insights into best practices across a wide range of rule of law topics.

Through interactive sessions that blend theory with practical skills, as well as study visits, our programme equips policy advisors, members of the judiciary, and other civil servants working in the government and justice sectors with the knowledge and skills needed to drive reforms within their respective countries.

In addition, by taking part in the training programme, participants become part of a large international network of alumni, lecturers, and public institutions in the Netherlands and in the target countries. This network serves as a platform for learning, exchange, and collaboration.

The Matra Rule of Law Training Programme is designed and delivered by the Netherlands Helsinki Committee, Leiden Law School, and The Hague Academy for Local Governance. The programme is commissioned by the Ministry of Foreign Affairs of the Netherlands, and implemented by the Netherlands Enterprise Agency (RVO) on behalf of the Ministry.

Target audience

The training on Human Rights is intended for English-speaking persons holding (mid to senior) positions in state bodies that are working on monitoring and improving the implementation of internationally agreed human rights standards. They can come either from independent institutions (such as National Human Rights Institutes, Ombudsman bodies) or from government ministries such as the Ministry of Justice, Ministry of Interior or the ministry in charge of promoting social equality. The programme is not primarily aimed at members of the judicial branch of government; affinity and familiarity with legal concepts is however needed, but an academic law degree is not required.

Participants will be expected to offer an active contribution to the learning process and be in a position to implement the newly gained knowledge and insights in their respective organisation. The maximum number of participants per training is 27. The selection process will ensure gender balance and adequate representation of the countries concerned.

Training location:

Online and in-person training in The Hague, the Netherlands, with a study visit to EU institutions in Brussels, Belgium.

Background

In its relations with pre-accession and Eastern Partnership countries, the European Union requires stable government institutions that are able to guarantee the rule of law, human rights and protection of minorities. This means that national legislation is in line with international and European standards, that procedures exist to update legislation when necessary, and that this legislation is implemented properly. All government policy initiatives must be monitored for their impact on (human) rights and there must be mechanisms for monitoring and correcting practices that conflict with these rights. This training looks at mechanisms and policies that can be used to (better) safeguard internationally agreed human rights standards.

Objectives

The training programme aims to provide participants with an overview of concepts, mechanisms and policies that they can use within their area of expertise and how these can be set in motion and successfully implemented. The focus is on practical implementation. Presentations on the Dutch approach encourage the participants to reflect on the situation in their own country, to identify areas for reform and additionally nurture exchange on practices in each other's countries. In skills sessions, participants will develop their presentation, teamwork, and change management skills. While developing and presenting a Back Home Action Plan, they will put these skills into practice. Ultimately, knowledge and skills of participants are improved and networks for the exchange of best practices created.

Approach and structure

By being demand-driven in nature and by stimulating active participation, the training programme strives to achieve lasting results. When participants complete the training, they are sufficiently equipped to implement the newly gained knowledge and insights in their respective organisations. The online training programme offers a careful balance between theory and practice. The in-person part of the programme allows for further deepening of skills and knowledge and for networking. The in-person programme enables participants to learn from and to become acquainted with leading (Dutch and international) academics and professionals. Furthermore, it enables discussion between Dutch and EU practitioners and institutions in this field. Exchanging and comparing experiences is a key aspect of the programme.

Upon successful completion of the programme – which includes attendance to all components of the programme – participants will receive a certificate and become part of the Matra Rule of Law Training Programme alumni network.

Admission requirements

- The participant should currently be a (mid to senior-level) civil servant;
- The participant should clearly demonstrate their professional interest in this training and the uses they would make of the insights gained from the training;
- The participant should have a good command of spoken and written English;
The participant should be highly motivated;
- The participant should be comfortable sharing their knowledge with fellow participants (contributing during the live sessions and regular knowledge sharing in the digital learning environment is required);

- Participants should submit a signed employer's statement granting permission to participate in the training programme.

Required time commitment

The participant should be able to dedicate sufficient time to the programme. For the 2-week online programme, 6-8 hours per week are required. For the 2-week in-person programme in the Netherlands, 8 hours per day are required. Furthermore, the participant should be available for several follow-up activities as described in this brochure.
